EPPS'S COCOA

Breakfast.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually strengthened, instead of being undermined. Our tendency to disease, hundreds of subtle miseries are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourself well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY.

Interesting Items Picked up by our Busy Correspondents

Selby.

The Y. P. A. will give a lawn social in the near future. More definite announcements will be made next week.

Wilton.

No service next Sunday morning in the Methodist church as Rev. S. Crookshanks will be attending conference.

The Sunday school picnic will be Friday, June 12th, at Sydenham Lake. A steam yacht has been chartered for the occasion and a collection will be taken up on the grounds to defray the expenses. A splendid time is anticipated.

Mrs. Barbara Davy died Friday afternoon after a lingering illness, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. Babcock. The services were conducted Sunday morning by Rev. Crookshanks.

Mr. and Mrs. John McKim, Selby, were visiting here at Mr. W. H. Neilson's on Tuesday.

Odessa.

The musical entertainment given under the auspices of the Methodist church, on Friday evening last was a decided success. The programme was of a high-class character, and the almost universal opinion seems to be that it was one of the best entertainments ever given here. The Friends of Napanee and Newburgh must have greatly assisted their reputation as musical and electrocution artists of ability.

A. E. Timmerman left on Wednesday, 27th ult., for New Brunswick, having secured a position on the C.P.R. He will be greatly missed here, having filled many responsible and honorable positions. He was chairman of the Board of Education, financier of A.O.U.W., and secretary of Ernestown Reform Association.

Rev. Mr. Thomson, an ex-pastor of the Methodist church here, occupied the pulpit on Sunday evening. He was greeted with a crowded house.

The Junior Athletes of Kingston came out on Saturday and walloped our kids at baseball by a score of nine to five. The Odessa boys were somewhat weakened by want of practice, some of them making their first appearance on the diamond this season.

As a result of the visit of Mrs. Young of the Methodist church in Canada, has been organized here with the following officers:—President—Mrs. (Rev.) W. G. Young; Vice-President—Mrs. S. D. Clarke; Treasurer—Mrs. J. G. Day; Rec. Sec.—Miss Minnie Jones; Cor. Sec.—Miss Gerty Hodge.

We are pleased to note the action of the synod in granting the sum of $400 to the church of St. Alon, the Martyr, here. It will be sufficient to place the congregation on its old footing among our ecclesiastical bodies.

The Mail having concluded the contest for the "popular clergyman's free trip," we notice the effort was "wild" in its results. We suggest that they take a vote to ascertain who is the most popular and successful statesman, John Charles Rykert or Thomas McGreevy, Esq.

It seems to require the assistance of the law, administered in liberal doses by our worthy magistrates, in order to act as an educational force on the minds of the young gents of the day. The sports of this village seem to regard the Salvation Army barracks as a rendezvous for fun, and if their actions is any criterion to judge by they no more associate the idea of religious worship with the Army than with a saloon. Time and again cases have been entered in court complaining of their disturbance of religious worship, but it all seemed to be without any very material effect. The latest case of the kind occurred on Monday evening last when Mr. H. Burnett assaulted the gentleman at the door, Mr. Albert Ackerman by striking him in the face with his fists. As a result of the disturbance, a warrant was issued for his arrest and he was kept in "durance ville" on Tuesday night, and at 10 a.m., Wednesday morning he was charged before H. S. Davy, J. P., with criminal assault, and fined $5 and costs, or $3.20 in all. The magistrate summing up the case spoke very strongly of the seriousness of the charge of disturbing worship, etc., and cautioned the defendant, together with all other young men, that the freedom to worship was accorded to the S.A. in equal rights with any other denomination. In concluding, he remarked that if there should at any future time a case of a similar character come before him it would be dealt with as severely as the law would permit.

The minutes of last meeting were then read.

GULF GREEK.

This is an appearance quite an excursion over Long Lake this morning, though it is rippled up very much by the sharp breeze that blows upon it. What is up? What is the cause of this sudden stir?

Some of the Rathlin Co. army has been unexpectedly called up to Clare River dam, which was torn off yesterday by the Clare Viewers. They were bound to have the stream cleared from all obstructions to have the full flow of water. Yes, but they should consider that the principal part of the water in that stream at present, is the water which is let down from Cross Lake for to help the drives along towards its destination, therefore we can't see that they had a right to that water of which they have been abundantly supplied since yesterday. We may naturally suppose that the stream in Clare river would be very low at present if there were no other water to supply it, because there has been no rain for its support.

We need rain very much is the common utterance of the people, this is evident. There is a larger cloud to be seen to day, than the one of old. It may bring rain.

Mrs. Joseph Lot has presented Mr. Lot with twin babies recently. We would congratulate Mr. Lot for his double portion. Mother and babies are said to be doing well.

Newburgh.

Rev. M. Taylor, of Granley, conducted the morning services in the Methodist church last Sunday, and Rev. W. R. Young gave us a home thrust in the evening. Rev. Taylor and Young are both young ministers and have each seen active service on this circuit years ago. They were quite successful while on Newburgh circuit, having each obtained a wife, which is more than they have accomplished on other fields.

Rev. Jas. Curtis, will occupy the pulpit next Sunday evening. No doubt the church will be crowded with people anxious to hear once more the Rev. gentleman who three years ago had their highest esteem.

Straight as a gun barrel. Some of our citizens are going to form a syndicate and start a canning factory here. Now this is a step in the right direction as this is one of the finest fruit growing districts in the country and thousands of bushels of fruit go to waste every year simply because the people have no handy market. We have a grand water power here anxious to drive the wheel and our capitalist could not have thought of a better plan to build up the village and draw the people to its centre. What with another jailer, the office work was done by Mr. Robt. Saul of Camden East. Bob puts up a fine wall and his work will bear inspection at any time.

Many of our townsmen have bid a long farewell to all their whiskers, no more a pastime for the idle winds.

Mr. C. W. Thomson returned home from Ohio on Saturday last.

Mrs. Thos. McAvoy has been quite ill for the past week but is now convalescent.

Mr. E. M. Caton and wife, of Enterprise, spent last Sunday with Mrs. L. E. Percy. It has been decided that the Newburgh B. C. and the Useless Nine of Camden East will play in Napanee on July 1st for a purse of $25. This is likely to be a closely contested game.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

JUNE SESSION.

Council met on Tuesday afternoon, June 2nd, at 2 o'clock.

Warden took the chair at 2.45, and said he was glad to meet the council again, all looking well.

There were two or three matters he wished to call attention to which had occurred since last meeting of the council. Yeomans lost a horse on the county road in the Township of Richmond, and was seeking indemnity from the county. In the matter of the clerk's salary, the case had been submitted by him to Mr. Dalton McCarthy, and as he gave it as his opinion that the county was liable, Mr. Roe had been paid $180 by his, the warden's, authority. There were two bridges carried away by the spring floods, and attention had been given to secure public travel. The treasurer had flatly refused to give any more security to the council. These matters would come before them again in the ordinary course of business during the present session, so that he did not need to enlarge upon them.

The minutes of last meeting were then read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Report of expenditure on Collin's bridge, two accounts, one for $10.52 and one for $31.59. Referred to Road and Bridge Committee.

Report of grand jury, saying eleven men and one female were in gaol. The drains baker, that the motion be referred to the Road and Bridge Committee.

Moved by Mr. Brydon, seconded by Mr. Sweetnam, that the Council make a special grant of $50 to the Flinton Model School. Referred to Education and Printing Committee.

Moved by Mr. Thompson, seconded by Mr. Dulmage, that a grant of $100 be made to Newburgh for the purpose of planking the County bridges at Newburgh. Referred to Committee on Roads and Bridges.

Moved by Mr. Baker, seconded by Mr. Carson, that the Warden make an order to obtain coupons of Debentures Nos. 22 to 30, in order that the same may be destroyed. Carried.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

Mr. Membury moved, seconded by Mr. Ball that the sum of $300 be paid to the township of Adolphustown on the completion of the telephone line, in accordance with former resolution and that the Warden be authorised to sign an order for such payment when the line is in working order. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Carson, seconded by Mr. Thompson that a special grant of $400 be made to Napanee high school, and $300 to Newburgh high school. Referred to Committee of Education and printing.

Moved by Mr. Allison, seconded by Mr. Wager that the case of John Yomans, for the loss of a horse, be referred to a special committee consisting of Messrs. Membury, Fraser, Parks, Ball, and the mover, to report at this session of the county council.

Moved by Mr. Carson, seconded by Mr. Baker that a special grant of $250 be made to Napanee model school. Referred to education and printing committee.

Mr. Patterson appeared in answer to a notice, to speak as to expenditure of monies in Amherst Island. Mr. Patterson wished to know what explanation was wanted. The resolution calling upon Mr. Patterson to attend was then read. The report of roads and bridge committee was also referred to. There was quite a little "breezy" and "funny" time just here. The council did not seem to know what was wanted of Mr. Patterson; and Mr. Patterson did not seem to know just what was wanted of him. Consequently there seemed to be a "middle." Looking at the dispute from a disinterested standpoint, it would seem as though some one wanted to find fault, and did not succeed very well. The whole affair put one in mind of the old play "Much Ado about nothing."

Mr. Carson thought the time of the County Council was taken up with things spite. The auditors of his township, both opponents of his, had examined the pay sheets and the vouchers, and had certified them to be correct.

A motion to adjourn was carried at this point, shutting off further discussion on the Patterson question, it being evident enough that a vote clearing Mr. Patterson of all blame should be carried. Majority rules however.

TUESDAY MORNING.

Mr. Allen, of Amherst Island, appeared this morning. It is a little peculiar that Mr. Allen should have been absent until after Mr. Patterson had exploded the difficulty which was made in connection with the pay list of last year's county grant. He should surely have been present when this matter was discussed and made satisfactory.

Moved by Mr. Baker, seconded by Mr. Thompson, that Mr. Dafos being sick the name of the Warden be added to the Finance Committee. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Fraser, seconded by Mr. Babcock that a special grant of $200 be given to the township of Ernestown, to assist them in repairing and fencing abutments over big creek on the Ernestown Camden and Sheffield county roads. Referred to the road and bridge committee.

Moved by Mr. Baker, seconded by Mr. Carson, that whereas the Warden for 1890 caused a writ to be served on the treasurer of the county for $15,000 for an alleged irregularity, and the time having now elapsed for proceeding, the Warden is instructed to settle the same and pay the costs.

Mr. Parks said the auditor's report showed there were some irregularities, and asked to have the matter laid over to enable him to make a motion.

It was agreed to lay the matter over until Friday morning.

Moved by Mr. Allison, seconded by Mr. Carson, that the chairman of road and bridge committee and the Warden have a good protection placed on the west side of the Mooney crossing. Carried.

Council adjourned until 4 o'clock for the benefit of the committees.

peared, discharged at short notice by the firm. It seems likely he will be kept out of the way. The books of the firm, although twice ordered to be produced, have not yet all arrived. The mere fact that the bookkeeper is missing when wanted speaks volumes. It is a very poor game to play. People will naturally surmise the worst when a witness is "spirited away" to avoid giving evidence.

CHIEF Justice Dorion, of the Province of Quebec, passed away on Saturday last, after a brief illness. He was a Liberal of the best type, was Minister of Justice in Mackenzie's time, and was knighted in 1877. As a judge he was strictly impartial, and the Province loses one of its best men by the death of Antoine Aimé Dorion. For years Sir Antoine was the leader of the Quebec Liberals in politics. He was regarded as the soul of honor and integrity. In debate he was eloquent and forcible. By precept and example Sir Antoine did his utmost to promote purity and honesty in public life. From him Mr. Laurier imbibed those broad, generous and upright views which are now the chief attributes of the Liberal leader's character. In 1874 Sir Antoine retired from his position as minister of justice in Mr. Mackenzie's administration and from public life, to accept the office of chief justice of the Court of Queen's Bench.

NOTWITHSTANDING the strong opposition that Reformers have again and again given to Sir John A. Macdonald and some of his legislation, when the news spread abroad that he was afflicted, there was no lack of sympathy on their part for the renowned leader of the Conservative party. If anything the foremost Reform journals have been more effusive in their expressions of sympathy than have the party organs. We have no explanation to offer for this save the fact that as a genial gentleman outside of politics Sir John had few equals. Largely he was indebted for the supremacy he has so long enjoyed to this fact. With everyone the absorbing topic of conversation is the condition of the premier, and his merits claim far more attention than will be the case some time hence. This is hardly the time to go into probabilities as to the future, although many are so doing—it being a matter of considerable moment as to who shall succeed Sir John. The one wish of all Reformers seems to be that Sir John should live to direct the policy of a party which is fast losing its hold upon the country.

AFTER making all possible enquiries, we have been unable to discover any reason or grounds for the protests against the return of either D. W. Allison or Geo. W. Dawson. Not even a pretext can we discover. These protests are therefore to be attributed to "pure cussedness." The same vote which elected the present members to the Dominion House will, if properly exerted at the next municipal elections, entirely alter the complexion of the County Council. This is one of showing disapprobation of the tactics pursued by the Conservative party. It would be a very satisfactory way, however, and should be done. To be respected in the political arena a party or an individual must show strength. The present County Council is constituted something like the Dominion House of Parliament, and its legislation is of the same kind, namely, all for the benefit of the Tory party. Incidentally the country receives some benefit from what they do. But the first consider-

"Are you aware, Moses," inquired his friend, "that Wallie Dinsmore has seen the real woman in Vienna, and knows this one to be a fraud?"

The general set down the cocktail with which he was about to celebrate his good fortune. "Are you lying, or what's the matter?" he demanded brusquely.

"I had it from the man himself, you old blackguard," rejoined the other composedly.

"Does he know who this one is?"

"If he doesn't he probably will before long."

The general reflected. At last he said: "Well, I ain't scared. What should he make a row for? It ain't going to hurt him, and what's more, he's taken up the girl himself. It may tickle him to find out the facts, but he ain't a fellow to talk. If it was you, now, I might want to buy you off; but he's another sort." And Gen. Inigo tossed off his cocktail with renewed serenity.

"I'll bet you you're mistaken," said Jocelyn.

"I don't bet with you, my good friend," replied the impresario, shaking his head and chuckling sardonically. "I'll tell you what I will do, though," he added, after a moment. He took from his pockets a check book and a Mackinnon pen, and wrote a check, which he showed to Jocelyn. It was $10,000, and was drawn to Jocelyn's order.

"You can have that check," said Inigo, "and be fingering the bank notes in half an hour from now, on one condition."

"Go on," said Jocelyn.

"On condition that you take yourself out of the whole business; and leave me to deal with the girl direct. It's a damned shame, by Jupiter, that you should be putting 30 per cent. of her money into your pocket every time she sings, and making her think I pay her that much less than I do. I'll buy you out for $10,000, cash down, to-day, and take the risk of her bursting up, and everything else. I'm talking money, that's what I'm doing; and there it is! Will you do it?"

"You may go to the devil!" said Jocelyn, pushing back the check book, though not without an effort. "I'll have you to know that money's not the only

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1891.

THE tongue of rumor says Mr. J. J. C. Abbott, of the Senate, will be chosen as Sir John's successor, and that Sir John Thompson will in that case lead the Commons.

DRY, very dry weather, seems to be prevalent all over Ontario. The hay crop will be light in consequence, and in many places the grain sown has not half germinated. Unless rain, and lots it, comes soon, Ontario crops will be poor.

SIR George Stephen has been raised to the peerage. He is now a resident of the old country; but we must suppose the honor conferred is intended as a recognition of his services to Canada, in connection with the building of the C. P. R., out of which undertaking he has made profit enough to be able to keep up the dignity of a peer. He is to be styled Lord Mount Stephen.

In the month of April, 1891, this Dominion shipped to the old country produce and goods to the value of £22,553. In April of last year the Dominion shipped exports to the value of £133,537. Our exports to the United Kingdom seem to be shrinking instead of expanding. The first four months of this year make a poor showing as against the first four months of last year.

ONE explanation given of Sir Chas. Tupper's vindictive attacks on the Grand Trunk is that he was refused the usual favor of a free pass on the line when he was here on his campaign bout. The explanation is plausible. Sir Charles thinks he owns Canada and all contained therein, and he is not used to paying his railway fares. Touch Tupper's pocket and you touch his heart and rudely violate his conscience.

ON May 20th, at Ottawa, Mr. Laurier moved a vote of censure on Sir Charles Tupper, for his gross and unjustifiable attacks on the Grand Trunk management. It was while this question was being discussed that news was received of Sir John's serious illness, causing an adjournment. On June 1st there was a short session of the Commons, mainly taken up by discussing a motion of Mr. Davin's concerning second homesteads in the Northwest. The Tupper discussion was not resumed. On June 2nd the matter was resumed, and discussed fully, Tupper's son defending the father's acts.

So far as the McGreevy investigation is concerned the public may as well be satisfied at once that there is a "nigger on the fence." The efforts of Mr. Tate and others to get at the truth will be thwarted if possible. Already the investigators have come across a stumbling block, inasmuch as Martin P. Connolly, bookkeeper for the firm of Larkin, Connolly, & Co., has dis-country receives some benefit from what they do. But the first consideration is the welfare of the party and its individual members. The Reformers of Lennox and Addington are numerous enough to put a stop to this kind of business, and it is their paramount duty to do so, especially as the Conservative party have shown so little respect for their votes as to protest the election before spoken of in spite of the fact that the election of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bell were allowed to pass without fictitious opposition of any kind.

I am Great and You are Small.

A Sparrow swinging on a branch
Once caught a passing fly,
"Oh let me live!" the insect prayed,
With trembling piteous cry
"No," cried the sparrow "you must fall,
For I am great and you are small."
The bird had scarce begun his feast
Before a hawk came by,
The game was caught. "Pray let me live!"
Was now the sparrows cry.
"No!" said the captor, "you must fall,
For I am great and you are small."
An Eagle saw the rogue and swooped
Upon him from on high.
"Pray let me live! Why should you kill So small a bird as I?"
"Oh," said the eagle, "you must fall,
For I am great and you are small."
But while he ate the hunter came:
He let his arrow fly
"Tyrant!" the eagle shrieked, "you have No right to make me die!"
"Ah," said the hunter, "you must fall.
For I am great and you are small."

Sir John A. Macdonald, G.C.B., etc.

"Le Roi est mort: Vive le Roi!"
The King is dead: Long live the King!"
Thus said his loyal subjects when died a French or English monarch of a few centuries ago; their idea being that the moment one king died another instantly inherited the divine right of succession. The incumbent was a mortal, but the king never died. So also their priests teach Tibetan Tartars to believe about the transmigrating soul of their dying Lama, or Pope. But unhappily it is not so with our modern departed great men, Sir John A. Macdonald is dying. What is there now to stand between unhappy Canada and—Tupper? Where is the man—where are the ten men that can hold the provinces together, as Sir John has done these twenty years; that can keep the Confederation from falling into its original fragments; that can avert revolution? The news of his death will be as the sounding of the trumpet; the end has begun.

The future is too close upon us to admit of our pausing to review the past. Besides, they who dwell close beside it cannot realize the height of a mountain as readily as those at a distance. One hundred years from now,—the passions and the partialities of the politics of the present being buried—history will do Sir John A. Macdonald justice. He became a man of mature age and of ripened wit just before the Rebellion of 1837; he dies just before the Revolution of 1891. Hitherto men have said, "Sir John is at the helm; and that means that some way will be found in which things can go." But now, although doubtless you and I will continue to toil, and sleep, and eat, and hunger just as if no great an event had not happened, who is there in sight able to preside over the destinies of our country?

The "Old Policy" is abandoned; the "Old Leader" is dying; WHAT ABOUT THE OLD FLAG?

May 31, 1891.

Weak Women.

The more sensitive nature of the female sex renders women much more susceptible than men to those numerous ills which spring from lack of harmony in the system. The nervous system gives way, sick headache is frequent, the appetite is lost, and other ailments peculiar to the sex cause great suffering. Hood's Saraparilla is peculiarly adapted for such cases, and has received the most gratifying praise for the relief it has afforded thousands of women whose very existence before taking it was only misery. It strengthens the nerves, cures sick headache and indigestion, purifies and vitalizes the blood, and gives regular and healthy action to every organ in the body.

Minard's Liniment cures Burns, etc.

FOR THE next few days everybody in New York could quote a more or less authoritative opinion as to the merits of Mlle Marana; for the guests at the Dinsmores' dinner and reception had been so selected that their various reports could reach all sections of polite society. The verdict on the part of both sexes was almost universally favorable, and every one consequently made preparations to extend further invitations to her. The only noteworthy dissentient voice was that of Mrs. Bright, who affirmed that the great prima donna was underbred and presuming. Even this critic, however, admitted that she had redeeming traits.

"In her proper place she is very well. She is a professional singer; and, though she is very professional she is really a very good singer, too."

Mr. Bartslyffe, the amateur composer, contributed an able article to a leading journal, in which he attempted to assign Mlle. Marana her place among the great singers of the last forty years.

"To the culture, the vivacity, and the subtlety of the present," he wrote, "our Russian guest unites the training, the knowledge, and the solidity of the past, Rooted in the soil of the best traditions of her predecessors, the flower of her genius blossoms in the new sunshine of today. The grandeur and dignity of her method are vivified and sweetened by rare personal charms of manner, and by that seeming artlessness of execution which is the finest triumph of art. Her appearance among us is another proof, not only of the reputation which we of the western world have attained of being the final tribunal in matters of musical taste and judgment, but of the great fact that real genius is always unique."

"Mlle. Marana recalls no other singer; she is herself and to say this is (as those who have heard her will testify) to pay her the highest compliment. She does not accentuate an epoch—she makes one. Of her dramatic capacities we have yet to judge, but simple and unassuming as is her bearing in private society it is easy for the initiated to discern in the grace, effectiveness and precision of her gestures and carriage the results of that long training upon the stage and command of its resources which alone can make the poetry of movement a second nature. Our only misgiving is," added the writer, "that the ordinary repertoire of operas may fail to afford Mlle. Marana an adequate opportunity for the manifestation of her powers. While yielding to none in our reverence and admiration for the operatic production of the great composers, from Mozart to Wagner we may be permitted to wish that some new work might be forthcoming, essentially modern in its scope and quality, and thereby answering more completely to the requirements of modern culture. It would indeed be a matter of congratulation were such a work to claim an American origin!"

Those who know the authorship of this article made merry over the perforation, and inquired archly whether Bartslyffe had at last found somebody capable of appreciating his musical accomplishments. But by the majority it was accepted with becoming docility; and the impresario, it is needless to say, was enchanted with it. The allusions to the Marana's familiarity with the stage were especially grateful to him.

"I'll just tell you how it is," he said to Jocelyn; "you play off a little game on the public; and you feel nervous because there's one or two weak points in it. Well, sir, Jupiter! those weak points are just the very ones the public swallows the quickest. Now, here's this girl—she can sing; we all know that; but she's a born American, and she's never been on the stage. Well, sir, there was old Lucretia March at the dinner, who said she could hardly understand her on account of her Russian accent; and now Bartslyffe comes out and swears she must have been born behind the footlights! The next thing'll be we shall have some woman turning up and vowing the Marana has run off with her husband and a hundred thousand dollars."

lyn, pushing back the check book, though not without an effort. "I'll have you to know that money's not the only thing I'm after. I've got my own views about the girl, and I'll manage the business my own way."

The impresario detached the check from the book, and having rolled it into an allumette lit his cigar with it. "That's all right," said he, crushing the burnt remnant under his foot, "only don't you talk to me no more about betting! I know a man when I clap eyes on him, and I know a woman, too, and I guess you'll have time to grow to be a bigger rascal than you are before you rope in my prima donna! She's mete for your betters, my boy, and they're not far to look for!"

Jocelyn contrived to maintain a contemptuously indifferent demeanor, but it is certain that whoever made money out of the impresario was obliged to eat it in one way or another.

Meanwhile Miss Beatrix Randolph, or the Marana, as all the world now calls her, was in more cheerful spirits than she had been before her reception at the Dinsmores. She liked the Dinsmores; she was inclined to like almost everybody. She tried to take a charitable view even of the young gentlemen in high shirt collars who complimented her so badly, and said things which she knew were witty only because they laughed at them. She reflected that she knew nothing of the freemasonry of modern society, and that probably the young gentlemen intended only to be polite and entertaining. Mrs. Bemax, when appealed to on the subject, said they—Mr. Witman and the rest of them—were wealthy and well connected, and that it was desirable for a lady connected with the stage to cultivate their acquaintance.

"A little social relaxation is an excellent thing for you, my dear mademoiselle," declared this worthy lady, "and a capital way to get rid of that little frigidity and stiffness you have brought with you from the country. Ladies connected with the stage are free to fraternize along the oce—All the oce—him take any liberty, don't betray any timidity; he won't understand it."

"It is one thing for me to do a like," replied mademoiselle, "and another thing for me to let other people do as they like. I don't mean to be stiff, but there is no reason why I should be bothered either."

"It will be no bother when you are used to it," Mrs. Bemax replied; but at the time she did not advocate her view any farther.

The finishing touches were being put to the theatre, and Geoffrey Bellingham was constantly on hand to oversee the work, consequently he and the prima donna must needs meet occasionally. He said very little to her, and was generally very busy when she might have entered into conversation with him; but she had an impression that he kept his eyes upon her often when she was not looking at him; and his appearance at the theatre was generally coincident with the hour of her rehearsals. One day after she had been singing a grand scene very effectively she happened to catch his eye in the stage box, where he stood leaning against the curtained partition, abstractedly knotting and unknotting a piece of tape. His gaze was so earnest, and at the same time so melancholy, that the prima donna, obeying an impulse that was partly curiosity, but partly something else, went round to the box when the scene was over, and met him as he was coming out.

"How unhappy you looked!" she said. "Was anything wrong?"

He stared at her for a moment, and said ironically, "Oh, you're a great artiste!"

"I mean to be," she answered smiling. "A great actress, too! I should like to see you when you are yourself."

"I am myself now," Marana. Then she remembered
she was not telling the whole truth and blushed and looked down.

"Then you must be a remarkable woman! But you probably don't know that you always appear to me like a fresh and innocent American girl. I can't see anything foreign or—stagey in your talk or manners. Extreme meet,
I suppose, and, like Paul, you are all things to all men."

This speech made the young diva feel that the world was very wide and very cruel, and the tears came into her eyes. She was alone; there was no one to answer for her or to protect her.
She would not have minded so much what most people thought of her,
but it would have been a great comfort to her if this man, at any rate, had by some divine faculty of vision been able to see through the disguise that veiled her from the world. He did see through it; but he did not believe what he saw. He thought that his discovery was her deception, and the more she was frank and simple, the more she was her real self, the less would he believe in her. It was a dilemma between intuition and reason; and, with a man of the world, reason, in such cases, is apt to have the best of it.

It would have been easy for the prima donna to have enlightened him, and under certain circumstances she might have been tempted to do so. But now it was a matter of pride to her, if nothing else, to say no word that could lead him to infer that his sympathy was anything to her one way or the other. But she was at liberty to resent an insult, and she felt that to do so would help her
to preserve her composure.

"You probably don't know, sir," she said, imitating his phrase, "that to call even an opera singer the extreme opposite of fresh and innocent is not polite.
I am not so contemptible a thing to all men as I seem to be to you!"

"It was a brutal thing to say, and I did not mean it," he replied in a low voice. "But I can't say what I wish to you. There's no middle way." And before she could make up her mind what this meant he passed by her and walked heavily away down the corridor.

gent would perhaps have affected her somewhat less poignantly if it had not occurred immediately after her interview with Bellingham, and while her thoughts were full of him.
The revulsion was almost unendurable,
and made her feel as if the pollution could never be removed. Her bosom heaved, and bitter tears ran down her face. A woman is helpless enough at best, but she more than the rest, because she was fighting under a false name and reputation. Nevertheless, she could not retreat now give up the battle. She knew that her father had incurred pecuniary obligations to Inigo which could only be repaid through her. Besides, should she let her career be destroyed at the outset because a creature like Plotowski had insulted her? Should she not rather persevere until she had won such position and such power as should enable her to protect herself against all the world? There was a proud, unconquered spirit in her, which asserted itself in her forthrightness and distress more than it had ever done in her security and happiness.

And, after all, she was not without friends. At the worst she could apply to her father; and then there was Hamilton Jocelyn, who, although rather worldly and absurd, was really a good man, with her interests at heart, as was proved by his having obtained for her this splendid engagement, and there was Mr. Dinsmore, who seemed kindly and a gentleman; and Mr. Barclyffe, who had written all that praise of her in the newspaper; and there, too, was Geoffrey Bellingham; whatever his opinion of her might be, she did not believe that he would have stood by and allowed Herr Plotowski to insult her. No; things were not so hopeless, after all.

Mme. Bernax had been out to make a few purchases on Broadway. She now returned, carrying her little bundles by loops in the strings that tied them. She hoped mademoiselle had not been delayed or inconvenienced. Mademoiselle replied that she had not been delayed; but some-this meant he passed her by and walked heavily away down the corridor.

The prima donna fell into a deep and altogether painful reverie. She seated herself on a bench behind the scenes and followed out her musings with her chin on her hand. The rehearsal was going forward in front, the duets, the quartets and the choruses—but she was lost in thought. "There's no middle way." What was in his mind—in his heart—when he said that? There had been something very potent in his eyes, that she was sure of. What eyes he had! What a stern, resolute face, with nothing mean or commonplace in it! He was not like the others, either in aspect or in manner. His very carelessness and roughness were more high bred than their best behavior. Though he might go among other men, he would always be apart from them; he was lonely like herself, but, unlike hers, his was a voluntary and a noble loneliness. And he despised her because—because some other woman was despicable! That was unjust, and yet perhaps there was inadvertent justice in it. Perhaps, if he knew the truth, he would despise her no less on other grounds. But again there was some other feeling beside contempt at work within him. What could that be? The girl raised her head slightly, with a doubtful, musing smile on her lips.

There was a stealthy step behind her which she did not hear until it was close upon her. Then suddenly a pair of hands were pressed over her eyes, and her head was drawn back. For a moment she was too much amazed to resist; besides, she thought it must be—could not but be—some one who had a right to treat her so—her father, or even her brother Ed; no stranger would dare! Any impossibility was more possible than that. In a moment she felt kisses on her mouth—clumsy, offensively not a nascence gave a passion-twisted he hoped mademoiselle had not been delayed or inconvenienced. Mademoiselle replied that she had not been delayed; but something prevented her from telling Mme. Bemax about the adventure with the director. She feared madame would say something about the benefits of a little social relaxation and about getting used to it; and she did not wish to feel an aversion toward the good lady, who was in many respects agreeable to her. So she held her peace and hid her secrets in her heart; but she could not forget them.

SOMETHING FOR YOU.

ELECTRICITY IN THE CURE OF DIS-EASES. Attention is called to the Dorenwend Electric Belt. It is the invention of Mr. C. H. Dorenwend, of Toronto, Canada. It consists of a battery in a belt, given a current of electricity, which can be regulated by the wearer, and applied to the diseased parts by attachments. Official authorities pronounce it to be far ahead of the orthodox method of applying electricity. It can be used by anyone. Send for the book and price lists to the Dorenwend Electric B'l't Co., Toronto, see advertisement in another column.

THE PREMIER'S CAREER.

Characteristics of Canada's Greatest Politician—Sketch of a Wonderful Life—Wherein Lay the Secret of His Power

—In Harness Till the Last—Sorrow in the Death Chamber at Earnscleugh—The Turmoil of the House of Commons Silenced When the News is Announced,

TORONTO, June 8.—At the present moment 4 a.m. Wednesday, the bedside of Sir John is surrounded by weary and anxious friends, who are momentarily expecting the entrance of the Messenger of Death with his dread summons. Before these lines are seen in print the end will probably have arrived, and the great and much-loved Sir John will have become a matter of history. The latest bulletin says the desperate struggle with death is all but over.

The First Intimation in the House.

On Friday night last the Commons was engaged in a fierce party conflict. The conduct of Sir Charles Tupper during the recent elections was the occasion of vehement philippic from the mouths of Liberal leaders.

The heat and clamor of the scene was suddenly broken in upon by an ominous silence. A note had been handed to Sir Hector Langevin. He passed it to Mr. Foster, who read it and handed it to Mr. Bowell. Thence it passed to Sir John Thompson, who gave it to Mr. Haggart and heand Mr. Dewdney read it together. It went on to Sir Adolphine and thence to Mr. C. H. Tupper. The faces of the Ministers showed that the letter contained distressing news, and it was evident that the speech of Mr. Mackintosh, who had the floor, fell upon dull ears within the circle of the Cabinet. All day the subject of the Premier's condition had been in many mouths, and the bulletins from Earnscleugh were sought with eager interest.

During much of the day the report current was that his condition was easier and the prospect hopeful. This was the first bulletin issued.

Premier passed a quiet evening, till 6 o'clock when he had a protracted respiration, evidenced by perspiration, pulse 125, weak and irregular. Took nourishment at 9 p.m.
Signed: R. W. POWELL
J. A. GRANT.
H. P. WRIGHT.

The great perspiration on a cool night is indicative of the exhaustion of the Premier. His nourishment was champagne diluted with spollinaires. Lord Stanley walked over from Rideau Hall about 10 o'clock and remained until the bulletin was issued.

At 3 a.m. the condition of the Premier was much the same. The respiration continued. The breathing was rough at times and almost labored. He still retained consciousness. The action of the heart was weak and regular and heart failure was feared.

A man who has not left the sick bed since Friday is Stewart, the male nurse, who was for a time connected with the Montreal General Hospital. Stewart is on duty night and day, and attends to the wants of the illustrious patient along with Lady Macdonald, who is almost always by her husband's side. When Sir John has to be turned in his bed Stewart moves him, but Lady Macdonald is also on hand to see that nothing is done to disturb the patient. Stewart says that Sir John has not lost any weight, and that he must weigh from 160 to 170 pounds.

It is now learned that Sir John Macdonald had an attack of what was dangerously like paralysis two weeks ago. He was in his own room in the House of Commons when seized, and became partially unconscious and almost speechless. Sir John Thompson was with him at the time, and when the Premier revived in a few minutes requested the Minister of Justice to go to the Governor-General and keep an appointment which the Premier had made with His Excellency for that hour. Sir John Thompson was reluctant to leave him but the Premier insisted that he was all right again, in fact he afterwards walked part of the way to the cab in which he drove to Earnscleugh. As the Premier's illness increased, and he still went to his office in the Department of Railways and Canals, Sir John Thompson remonstrated with him and asked him to give up the portfolio and take that of President of the Council, which was vacant. He renewed the suggestion as

His Last Days.

Sir John attended the House on twelve of the nineteen days on which it has met during this session although in many cases the attendance was only for a few minutes. He was at the opening of this the third Parliament under the present Administration. He moved the election of Mr. Peter White as Speaker making in connection therewith some flattering references to his career in the House. On the day of the formal opening he wore for mer passed a quiet and comfortable night and this morning his physical strength shows distinct improvement since yesterday. (Signed) R. W. POWELL, M.D."

All evening, however, the rumors grew more ominous and disturbing. It was learned that at 6 o'clock Sir James Grant and Dr. Wright had been called to Earnscliffe. It began to be whispered that the Premier's condition was gravely critical. At first the more alarming rumors were generally discredited, and few were prepared for the shock which came later with the sad but pitiful news that

All Hope Was at an End,
and that death was at the door at Earnscliffe. The debate in the House had attracted a large crowd to the galleries. The Speaker's and Senators' galleries were crowded with the beauty and fashion of the capital. The bright faces, the handsome costumes and the eager buzz of gossip formed an interesting scene. In the chamber there were few vacant seats, for although it was Friday evening a division was expected and the House was much fuller than usual. The speeches were keen and vigorous, and the applause was frequent and hearty, reaching at times to the height of enthusiasm. Outside in the lobby there was a great throng of gossips and promenaders, when, like a cruel blow, came this bulletin, which was posted up on one of the pillars by the Commons post-office at 9:30 o'clock:

"EARNSCLIFFE, 8 p.m.—Sir John Macdonald suffered a relapse while I was with him at 4:15. He is quite conscious at present, but his condition is most critical. (Signed) R. W. POWELL, M.D."

In a moment the bulletin was surrounded. Signs of grief were upon every countenance. Sympathetic glances and sympathetic words were exchanged by political friends and political foes. The sad message flew from lip to lip into the press room, into committee rooms, into the party headquarters, into the chamber and into the eager galleries. A few minutes later the ominous message, whose passage from Minister to Minister has just been described, was made public, as follows:—

"I have just seen Sir John in consultation. His speech is gone. The hemorrhage has extended to the brain. His condition is quite helpless." (Signed) R. W. POWELL."

At 9 o'clock, it may be mentioned, a message of distress had been received by

at Earnscliffe, a measure prepared before this message was delivered.

Ministers in the House had sunk into a quiet state, while Mr. Mackintosh read newspaper extracts incidental to the line of his argument. Sir John Thompson passed down to the seat beside Mr. Foster, near the dying leader's chair, and then the Ministers on the front benches whispered together for a moment. An intimation was conveyed to Mr. Mackintosh to cease speaking, and the chamber roused to anxious interest as Sir Hector Langevin rose in his place. There were marks of sorrow on his face and his voice was low-toned and tremulous as he told the House the intelligence, which seemed to be given additional gravity by its announcement in Parliament.

Standing beside the vacant chair of the Premier, Sir Hector said:

"Mr. Speaker, we have known that, for the last few days the Premier has been lying ill at his residence. I have the painful duty to announce to the House that the news from Earnscliffe just received is that the First Minister has had a relapse and that he is in a most critical condition. We have reports from the medical men in attendance on the right hon. gentleman, and they do not seem to believe that he can live many hours longer. Under these circumstances I will move, seconded by Mr. Laurier, that this debate be now adjourned."

When Mr. Laurier rose all eyes were turned towards him.

"Mr. Speaker," he said, "under such sad circumstances it is a painful duty for me to second the motion of the hon. gentleman. The country will, of course, be shocked to hear the sad news, and I am sure it will not be possible to proceed with business further. I second the motion."

Sir Hector then moved the adjournment of the House, seconded by Mr. Laurier. The members moved hurriedly from their places and around Sir Hector to question him whether he had any further intelligence and then stood about in groups and in subdued voices talked of the news. The voice of criticism was hushed and human brotherhood reigned.

Up to midnight the telegraph offices were crowded, and messages were flashed from end to end of the Dominion, across the continent and by cable to England.

Sir John's Last Discussion.

The question upon which Sir John last spoke in the House was the subject of the debate which was adjourned by the news of his approaching death. It was late on Friday uniform with its broad, gold embroidery covering his breast and around his shoulders the insignia of the G.C.B. His first speech of the session was on the day after the formal opening. The subject was the dissolution of the last Parliament, and it was made in reply to Mr. Laurier and Mr. Mills. That was on a Friday and Sir John remained in the House until the adjournment at 11 o'clock. During the first week of the session he was in the House at every sitting. During the second he was only there one day. The third week he attended every day, but last week he was not able to leave Earnscliffe. The Premier's illness really dates from early in the year, but he only disappeared from public view on Friday the 22nd. On Sunday he became seriously ill. On Wednesday night the physician slept at Earnscliffe. Thursday night the patient was mending and slept well at night, so much so that Lady Macdonald, who had been up all the night before, retired to bed, and only occasionally went in to see how Sir John was resting. Dr. Powell arrived early Friday morning and found the Premier much improved. Sir John slept well and rose and took some beef tea for breakfast. He spent a portion of the morning dictating a few letters on public matters to his private secretary, Mr. Joseph Pope. He was doing a little work all day. He was weak, but Mr. Pope states that his mind was perfectly clear. "In fact," added Mr. Pope, "he was the same man." More than this, during the day the Premier discussed public policy and tactics, these things finding the foremost place in his mind. At 4 o'clock Dr. Powell arrived and found his patient sitting up and feeling better. He was telling the doctor how he felt and what nourishment he was taking. The doctor had hold of his hand, when suddenly and without warning the terrible stroke descended. The features, so familiar to all, became white and set, and Sir John fell back in the awful embrace of paralysis. The alarm was given and messengers were despatched for two consulting physicians, Sir James Grant and Dr. Henry P. Wright, who arrived quickly at the bedside of the unconscious Minister. This was between 4 and 5 o'clock. The Premier had no pain prior to the and probably suffered little.

At 9 o'clock, it may be mentioned, a message of distress had been received by

Sir John's Last Discussion.

The question upon which Sir John last spoke in the House was the subject of the debate which was adjourned by the news of his approaching death. It was late on Friday stroke, and the Premier said to him, "I'll let you know to-morrow what I will do." Too late, for that to-morrow never came.

The Queen's Message.

Sir John was lying awake when the first message of sympathy from Her Majesty came. Lady Macdonald, bending her silvered head close down beside the patient, whispered in his ear the words of consolation from his Queen. Those who watched him will never forget the bright, happy smile which lit up his face. He nodded slightly, and in a moment or two was asleep again. A cablegram tendering the sympathy of Lord Salisbury was received later on. He heard this, too, with evident pleasure.

To-day Lord Stanley received the telegram:

BALMORAL, June 2.
How is Sir John to-day? V. R. L.

sir John's Illness Referred to in the British House of Commons.

LONDON, June 3.—Sir John Macdonald's illness called forth a graceful tribute in the House of Commons last night from Mr. W. H. Smith. "Sir John Macdonald," said the First Lord of the Treasury, "is a man who, however his party conduct may be viewed, has earned the respect and admiration of all who knew the services he has rendered to the Dominion and the empire. There can be but one feeling of deep sorrow that a life so valuable seems about to end."

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Sta. veley Hill and Joseph Chamberlain joined the tribute to Sir John Macdonald, whose death they all said would be an international loss. The House generally showed keen sympathy with Canada.

The Daily Chronicle devotes the first page to Sir John Macdonald and speaks highly of his services to the Empire. It thinks that his program will suffice to keep the present Parliament at Ottawa active for some years and says that the choice of a leader lies between Sir Charles Tupper and Sir John Thompson.

Young Macdonald died on the unfortunate Pole, who had been 1. un- by illusive representations to cross the border after the rebellion proper had been put down. Barristers often at a stroke create a name, but none ever did so more signally than did his young lawyer in the defence of the Pole whom no ability could save from hanging in face of the evidence.

Thus, in 1839, at 25 years of age, he took rank as a leader of the bar. In the same year he entered into a legal partnership with Mr. Alexander Campbell, now Sir Alexander and Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

His First Seat In Parliament.

In 1844 Mr. Macdonald was elected to represent Kingston in the second legislature under the union, defeating Mr. Manahan. He entered Parliament at a very trying time. Sir Charles Metcalfe, the new Governor-General, had come freighted with notions of authority imbibed in India and Jamaica, and was not disposed to submit to dictation by a Canadian House. A quarrel with the ministry resulted over some appointments to office and the latter resigned. The historical battle for responsible government followed, in which the Conservatives found themselves by hereditary duty called upon to support the Governor-General. The young member for Kingston showed his great tact by withholding the strong temptation to break himself on the wheel. He did not plunge with premature impetuosity, as most young members do, into the debates of the House. His first speech was a bold one—in reply to Hon. Robert Baldwin—but it did him credit.

In May, 1847, he was selected by Attorney-General Draper for the vacant office of Receiver-General, who said: "Your turn has come at last, Macdonald." Very soon he assumed the management of the Crown Lands Department, which was in a very topsy-turvy state, and with surprising speed brought it under business methods.

Six Years in Opposition.

On the defeat of the Draper Ministry in 1848 by Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Lafontaine the stirring times took on more stirring guise, but Mr. Macdonald was conspicuous for his wise attitude. Six years in Opposition afforded him valuable discipline, and when he again sat on the Government benches there was but a single antagonist in the House for whom he was not a full match. While in Opposition he opposed the reform of King's College and the Rebellion Losses Bill. It was an insecure period for governments, and the debate had raged for seven days before Premier was motionless as a statue. The Speaker then put the resolution and it was voted down by a majority of 31.

Tooe Weighty to Be Ignored.

Such weighty charges, however, could not drop thus. Nor was it to be so. Next day in the house Sir John Macdonald gave notice of a motion, which was passed on the 8th of April, to the effect:

That a select committee of five members be appointed by this House to inquire into and report upon the several matters contained and stated in a resolution moved by the Hon. Mr. Huntington, member for Sheffield, relating to the Canadian Pacific Railway, with power to send for papers and records, to report the evidence from time to time and if need be to sit after the prorogation of Parliament.

The committee was composed of Messrs Blanchet, Blake, Dorion, Macdonald and Cameron. The committee got possession of some important documents, and some of these were published in the Montreal Herald. They were letters and telegrams sent by Sir Hugh Allan to two Chicago gentlemen—George W. McMullen and Charles M. Smith. In more than one of these Sir Hugh spoke of an expenditure of $300,000 in pronouncing the scheme to secure the contract for building the Canadian Pacific. Later still telegrams of Sir John Macdonald, Sir George E. Cartier, Sir Hector Langevin and other members of the Ministry were produced, which showed that these gentlemen had drawn for large sums of money for election purposes. These documents were so incriminating that Lord Dufferin, the Governor-General, determined to hold an extra session of Parliament, beginning August 13, 1853. Nevertheless, the House only met to prorogue. The committee was discharged and the whole matter referred to a Royal Commission consisting of three judges. The commissioners were Judges Day, Polette and Gowan.

Nothing Could Save Sir John.

Parliament met again on October 23. The report of the Royal Commission was laid before it. It was perhaps the most memorable session of the Canadian Parliament ever held. The attack on Sir John Macdonald began at once, and some of the ablest speeches ever heard on the floor distinguished it. It raged for seven days, during the course of which the hero of it all made one of the ablest addresses that had ever issued from his lips. He spoke five hours, concluding with the statement that he had given the best of his heart, his brain and his life to the service of his country. Nothing could save him, however, and after the debate had raged for seven days he

Dyspepsia

Intense Suffering for 8 years—Restored to Perfect Health.

Five people have suffered more severely from dyspepsia than Mr. E. A. McMahon, a well known grocer of Staunton, Va. He says: "Before 1878 I was in excellent health, weighing over 200 pounds. In that year an ailment developed into acute dyspepsia, and soon I was reduced to 102 pounds, suffering burning sensations in the stomach, palpitation of the heart, nausea, and indigestion. I could not sleep, lost all heart in my work, had fits of melancholia, and for days at a time I would have welcomed death. I became morose, sullen and irritable, and for eight years life was a burden. I tried many physicians and many remedies. One day a workman employed by me suggested that I take Sarsaparilla, as cured his wife of weakness. Finally the double-headed leadership made way for Sir Francis Hincks in 1851, and then it became apparent that Reform disruption was complete. It broke into two sections, one led by Sir Francis, the other by Mr. George Brown. Against foes within and without, the Government staggered along until 1853, when an appeal to the country caused its overthrow. Then came a great surprise. The Reform wing which coalesced with the Conservatives in the fight was passed over in the House and the defeated wing joined the Conservatives in a Coalition Cabinet. In this McNab-Morin combination Mr. Macdonald became Attorney-General, and great interest was excited by speculating as to whether the Reform or Conservative element would predominate. That the latter prevailed was chiefly due to the fact of the Attorney-General. Sir Allan McNab was soon relegated to the sick room and John A. Macdonald led the Ontario section and George E. Cartier the Quebec section.

Suffering

Interprovincial Troubles.

Between Upper and Lower Canada there was a growing gulf of suspicion and damaging distrust, which no man did more to remove than John A. Macdonald. His remarkable personality spanned the chasm for a long period and prevented complications the outcome of which can scarcely be surmised at this day. Discontent was everywhere and public sentiment was in a dangerous state of unrest. The Sanfield Macdonald Government came, but melted away as though in one night. The Tache-Macdonald (John A.) Administration followed, but its life hung in a ticklish balance all its days. Another coalition followed, in which George Brown, Oliver Mowat and William McDougall represented the Reformers.

Confederation a Fact.

As historians will tell, it was Sir John Macdonald who shaped the movement for Confederation, conducted the negotiations in the Maritime Provinces and in England and united the best energies of Canadian public men in favor of the great achievement. This is the greatest work of his life. His former labors led up to it, his afterward was made up of vigorous efforts to complete and perfect it. He was called upon to lead the first Administration after Confederation and in honor of knighted him.

In 1872 he appealed to the country in a general election and again secured a majority.

The Pacific Scandal.

Immediately after the general election of 1872 Sir John Macdonald fell on evil times. Hardly had the election concluded before rumors began to fly about to the effect that the elections had been won by gross corruption. There was nothing remarkable in this, it is the common cry of the defeated party after an election. But in this case the cry instead of waning as time elapsed rather increased and grew in magnitude. The substance of these charges was that Sir John Macdonald and some of his colleagues had accepted from Sir Hugh Allan large sums of money, which had been used in corrupting the electorate and winning their way back to power. It will be remembered that Sir Hugh Allan, head of the great Allan Steamship Line, was also president of a company which proposed to build the railway across the continent. For the purpose of securing the return of Sir John Macdonald and his friends, who, Sir Hugh realized, would be more favorable to his proposals than the Opposition would be likely to be, it was said that the great steamship owner had subscribed $300,000 to the campaign funds. Bit by bit the evidence on this point accumulated. Letters were published that had been got in an underhand way, but the first real thunder of the storm was heard on the floor of Parliament. About thirty days after the first session of the second parliament had re-assembled Lucius Seth Huntington, a member from the Province of Quebec, stood up in his place in the House and read from a paper in his hand the resolution, which has since become historical, calling for a committee of seven members to investigate the charges. Mr. Huntington merely read this resolution without further comment. There was a moment of painful silence in the House. The

... announced in a crowded house the resignation of his Ministry.

It was difficult to adequately appreciate the weight of the blow. It was a poor ending of 25 years of public life. It would have crushed even an extraordinary man. The rapidity with which he recovered from its effects and once more leaped into public favor and to power remain to this day the historical marvel of our time.

Fallen Upon Evil Days.

Sir John Macdonald's political career was closed, so everybody said. He had ruined the Conservative party. A proposition was made to depose him which was only prevented by the plucky opposition of a journalist, who stood in the breach and reminded the ingrates who would have knifed him how much they owed to their old leader. But even after this acceptance and endorsement the old leader endured many trials and mortifications. The Liberals were delighted at the action of their opponents. They felt assured that the man whom they described as thrice guilty would have too heavy a load to carry. There was no denying the seriousness of the charge which had been established against him. The Conservative chieftain had his defence, which it has more than once been mysteriously hinted would one day be given to the world, but in the meantime that defence could not be used. There is reason to believe that he at times himself considered that the party would be relieved of a burden if he would voluntarily retire. Indeed, it is a fact, although not generally known, that he authorized C. H. Mackintosh, editor of the Ottawa Citizen, to announce his retirement from public life. Mr. Mackintosh, who was a warm follower of Sir John Macdonald, prevailed on him to delay the announcement with the result that it never reached the light.

Returned to the Practice of Law.

During this period of eclipse he lived in Toronto. After a quarter of a century in public life he was still a poor man. He entered once more on the practice of his profession and could be seen occasionally in the courts at Osgoode Hall. It has been asserted that in the darkest of those days some fair weather friends who thought that his sun had set were inclined to turn their backs upon their old-time leader. He doubtless realized to the full the words which the immortal bard put into the mouth of the great cardinal who hung on princes' favors.

But slowly the tide turned. The National Policy was evolved and a Conservative club, bearing the name of National, was reared largely through his influence. The matchless politician with his trained finger on the public pulse read its very heart beats during those four years of opposition. The elections of 1878 came on and every body knows what happened on that fatal 17th of September. The man who had less than five years before been hurled almost ignominiously from power returned to it as the chief of a strong and exultant party.

Of Sir John Macdonald's subsequent career the salient points are well known in the public memory. Since the election of 1878 he has submitted his claims three times to the Canadian people, and three times they have declared him to be the darling son. In that period two great measures stand prominently forth—the upbuilding of the National Policy and the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Where Lay His Power?

The question has often been asked wherein lay his power. A survey of the civilized world fails to find his parallel. During the time he has held power in the Dominion the political figures have changed in every capital on the globe. Men have come and gone—arisen, shone and subsided into darkness. He alone grew from year to year in the people's affections until the spectacle was afforded of a statesman in a free state exercising all the powers of autocracy. He was continually surrounded by able men, men who exceeded him in eloquence, in learning, in power of intellect, but not one of them thought to dispute his pre-eminence. Cartier, Hincks, Galt, Tilley, Tupper, Howe Macdonald, all bowed to his spell and acknowledged the master.

It would be difficult, perhaps, to briefly state what were the qualifications and faculties that he brought into his career, but the chief of them seem to have been these:

A well-regulated ambition.

Concentration of aim.

Shrewd insight to the motives that actuate men.

Adaptability and lack of strong convictions.

Cosmopolite largeness of spirit.

Inflexible will and undeviating purpose.

It is the easiest to clean and handle; its movements are such that it allows the milk to be thoroughly mixed as the oscillation of the churn and all impure odors are carried off, which is very important in making milk edge butter. They will churn as quick as any other churn and leave your butter in the best possible shape to wash and salt without removing it from the churn. Now the most essential thing in the making of good butter is pure water for the chemist tells us that 90 per cent of milk is water and to get pure water it is necessary to use the Mathews Swing Churn and another other.

The next most essential thing is the right kind of a churn. Now farmers we have them both, just what you need. Try one of each, if they suit you buy them. They are sold on trial and warranted in every respect. Don't buy until you see them. Me or my agents will call on you as soon as possible. Manufactured by R. W. MATTHEWS, Picton, Ont. For sale by Harshaw Block, Napanee, 1st May 1891.

The Newburgh boys were determined to play a little more together and for the next 35 minutes the boys had to hustle. Notwithstanding they won four straight goals and the match. The Newburgh boys are all good runners and with practice will make the B. and W.'s take back water at their next meeting which will take place in Napanee in the near future. The Home team drove out to Newburg and were dined by the Newburgh Club, at Hopes Hotel. The boys speak in the highest terms of the hospitality they received on their first visit to Newburgh and think the Newburgh boys one and all jolly good fellows. When the return match is played in Napanee the Newburgh boys can expect a right royal welcome from the B. and W.'s if it is in their power to give it. W. B. Hurd acted as umpire and filled the position satisfactorily to both parties. Mr. Percy, of Newburgh, and Chas Tremble, of Napanee, were referees.

—When storm cavorts around your door,
And you, by the light of taper,
Sit closely by the evening fire
To read your country paper,
Just think of him whose work thus helps
To wear away the winter,
And put this question to yourself,
"Have I paid the printer?"

NOT SO EASY AS IT LOOKS.—
He was looking at a typewriter
Piling letters on his stick,
And each one seemed to fall in line
So gracefully and slick.
"That's easy work," he muttered,
"I e'er could do it well
If I only had a half a chance
And could the boxes tell."
The typewriter bade him try his hand;
O'erjoyed the stick he took—
He set one line—it's standing yet—

ASK YOUR FRIENDS ABOUT IT. Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c and $1 at all druggists'.

Young Man (to messenger boy): "What did the young lady say when you gave her the flowers?" Messenger Boy: "She asked the young fellow who was sittin' on the porch with her if he didn't want some for a buttonhole bouquet."

A CURE FOR CONSTIPATION AND HEADACHE. Dr. Silas Lane, while in the Rocky Mountains, discovered a root that was peculiar with other herbs, made a tea and certain cure for constipation. It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family Medicine. It will cure sick-headache and is the best Spring Medicine. For the blood, liver and kidneys, and for clearing up the complexion it does wonders.
